Tablet[®]Hotels REVIEW

A Locals know the Coco Hotel as the hospitality branch of the Copenhagen Food Collective, a network of a little more than a dozen restaurants that are dedicated to seasonality and sustainability. A similar approach underlies the Coco; it's powered by the same solar panels that supply the restaurants, making it carbon-negative, and it's Green Key certified and plastic-free to boot. It's not just virtuous, either — the interiors are perfectly balanced between hygge and hip, and the hospitality is refreshingly old-fashioned and personal. Café Coco serves coffee, drinks, and light fare in an effortless demonstration of Copenhagen Food Collective expertise.
