THINKING ABOUT

Despite this being Denmark's capital, there's an air of tranquillity about Copenhagen's cobblestone streets. Home to grand and glorious townhouses flanked by mystical lakes and pockets of lush greenery, the city is considered something of a benchmark for sustainable living - an accolade that can be traced through its hyperlocal menus, climate-conscious transport system and cutting-edge architecture.

Keen to explore the birthplace of Scandinavian design for yourself? We've rounded up seven brilliant boltholes that make for a genuinely restorative stay, where amenities such as in-house galleries, al fresco dining and custom-made furnishings await.

COCO HOTEL

Parisian chic meets Nordic cool at Coco Hotel. Located in the neighbourhood of Vesterbo, just a short stroll from the lively Meatpacking District, this is the first offering from Danish-based hospitality group Cofoco - and it does not disappoint. Outside, blue-striped awnings complement a sleek grey facade, with a private courtyard decorated with bistro-style seating making for great al fresco dining - meet you there for a pastry-filled breakfast. While the 88, light-filled bedrooms are all unique in shape and size, each is kitted out with the same custom-made materials, with colour-block walls, abstract prints and rattan furnishings. Hungry? Head to sibling restaurant Delphine, where you'll find an exceptional Mediterranean menu.
